Materuni Village sits about 15 km north of Moshi, high on the green southern slopes of Mount Kilimanjaro. It's home to the Materuni waterfall, Chagga coffee farms and some of the friendliest villages in the region. It's also easier to reach than many visitors expect.

The quick answer: from Moshi, Materuni is about 45–60 minutes by car. From Arusha allow 2.5–3 hours, and from Kilimanjaro International Airport (KIA) about 1.5–2 hours. The final 6–7 km is a bumpy dirt road, so take it slowly.

Below, we explain every way to get here, with tips from the people who make the journey every day.

Getting to Materuni from Moshi

Moshi is the gateway to Materuni. Most hotels are 45–60 minutes away by road. The road heads north out of town towards Rau and Mamboleo on smooth tarmac, then climbs the last 6–7 km on a rough dirt road through banana and coffee farms.

Option	Time	Cost	Best for
Pickup by your Materuni host	45–60 min	[confirm] per vehicle	Easiest: door to door, the driver knows the road
Taxi from Moshi town	45–60 min	[confirm] return, with waiting time	Couples and small groups who want flexibility
Boda boda (motorbike taxi)	40–50 min	[confirm] one way	Solo travellers with light bags, in dry weather
Dala dala (shared minibus) + short boda ride	1.5–2 hours	[confirm]	Budget travellers with time to spare

Our tip: agree the full price, including waiting time and the return trip, before you set off. If it has rained, the dirt section can be slippery, so a 4x4 or a driver who knows the road is worth it.

Taking public transport? Dala dalas leave from Moshi's central bus stand towards Uru and Mamboleo. Ask the driver to drop you at the Materuni turn-off, where boda bodas wait for the last stretch uphill. Send us a WhatsApp before you go and we'll tell you the current route.

Getting to Materuni from Arusha

Materuni makes a great full-day trip from Arusha. Allow 2.5–3 hours each way: about 1.5–2 hours on the main highway to Moshi, then the climb to the village.

- Private transfer: the most comfortable option. Leave Arusha by 7:00 to make the most of the day. Your host can quote a return vehicle: [confirm].
- Bus to Moshi, then a taxi: shuttle buses run between Arusha and Moshi throughout the day. From Moshi, take a taxi or arrange a host pickup as above.

Our tip: if you're coming from Arusha, consider staying one night in the village. Our overnight stay lets you see the waterfall without rushing and avoids driving back in the dark.

Getting to Materuni from Kilimanjaro Airport (KIA)

KIA sits between Arusha and Moshi, about 1.5–2 hours from Materuni by road. That makes Materuni a good first or last stop on a Tanzania trip.

- Arriving: book an airport pickup when you send your booking request. Share your flight number and we'll meet you at arrivals.
- Departing: a morning in Materuni and an evening flight work well together. Plan to leave the village at least 4 hours before departure.

Before you set off

- Start early. Morning light on the waterfall is beautiful, and you'll be back in Moshi before evening traffic.
- Check the weather. The long rains (March–May) and short rains (November) make the dirt road and trail muddy. Leave extra time.
- Wear proper shoes. The walk from the village to the waterfall is steep in places and can be wet.
- Bring cash in Tanzanian shillings for drivers, tips and small purchases. Mobile signal is patchy on the upper road.
- Message your host before leaving. We'll confirm the meeting point and send a map pin.

Publishing notes (delete before posting): times are based on Materuni Hosts' own booking page and published guides (BornWild, materuni.com route guide). Have someone who makes the trip check every [confirm] price and the dala dala route. Add 3–4 of your own photos: the dirt road, the village sign, a boda at the turn-off, and the waterfall.
